

research

Home

NATIONAL

Coffee reduces breast cancer risk: study

Women at risk of breast cancer can reduce their chances by drinking a lot of coffee, say researchers at the University of Toronto. Their study found that high-risk women who drank one to three cups daily reduced their odds of breast cancer by 10 per cent, while those who drank six or more cups reduced their odds by 69 per cent. Health experts warn coffee can increase blood pressure. ■